To Our Readers

In March 2001, The Colorado Trust and the Colorado Office of Suicide Prevention joined together to collect and analyze information about suicide in Colorado. As the ninth-leading cause of death in our state, this devastating problem deserves considerable attention.

We could not have predicted that six months later the urgency to address this crisis would be even greater. In the aftermath of the September 11th terrorist attacks and rising unemployment, mental health experts warn that the already alarming rate of suicide in this country could worsen. This is indeed a disturbing prediction in light of current statistics:

- 30,000 people commit suicide each year in the United States – a rate of 11 in every 100,000 Americans, or one person every 17 minutes.
- The Rocky Mountain region has the highest suicide rate in the country.
- In 1998, the suicide death rate in Colorado was more than 14 people per 100,000, making it the 12th highest in the country and 36% higher than the national average.
- An estimated 9,600 Coloradans seriously contemplate suicide each year and approximately one-half to two-thirds of these individuals are not being treated for their suicidal symptoms.

We also know that very few people commit suicide because of a single event in their lives. U.S. Surgeon General David Satcher has noted that an estimated 90% of suicides are associated with a history of mental illness, usually depression, or substance abuse. Indeed, new findings suggest that there are ways to identify and treat those who are at risk of attempting suicide, meaning that we can help to prevent these tragic events.

In 2000, The Colorado Trust began to address this issue by partnering with Mile High United Way. This school-based program – located in Denver Public Schools' North and East High Schools, and at Urban Peak, a shelter for homeless youth – seeks to reduce teen suicide. This is but one example of approximately 200 suicide-prevention programs available in Colorado. Additionally, the state has taken steps to address suicide in a comprehensive manner. During the 2000 legislative session, the Colorado Office of Suicide Prevention was established within the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment. One of the top identified priorities for this office was to gain a full understanding of the suicide-related needs and resources in the state. Guided by an advisory group comprised of Colorado's leading mental health and suicide experts, the Suicide in Colorado report provides that foundation. It identifies people who are most at risk of committing suicide, existing suicide-prevention resources and gaps that need to be addressed. This companion publication, Suicide Prevention and Treatment Programs in Colorado, details suicide-related statistics and prevention resources for each Colorado county.

It is our sincere hope that these reports serve as useful resources for mental health professionals, physicians, and agencies and organizations in communities across Colorado that provide help to suicidal individuals and their families, and that they be used as a means to increase awareness about this tragic problem.

INTRODUCTION

This report provides county-by-county data for all Colorado counties on suicide-related statistics and suicide-prevention programs. It also serves as a companion publication to Suicide in Colorado, a comprehensive report from The Colorado Trust that details the characteristics of individuals most at risk of committing suicide, suicide-prevention resources, components of a comprehensive suicide-prevention system and strategies for combating the problem. (To receive a copy of the full report, Suicide in Colorado, please contact The Colorado Trust; 303-837-1200; www.coloradotrust.org.)

The data sources for the suicide-related statistics are detailed at the end of each table in section 2. Information on suicide-prevention programs was compiled via a survey administered to 718 key county-based stakeholders, including: directors of regional mental health agencies, superintendents and key personnel from local school districts, directors of county public health departments and/or public health nurses, directors of local hospitals and community health centers, and directors of social service agencies and other community-based organizations.*1

The inventory of suicide-specific resources is organized into seven categories of services:

- Community education
- Gatekeeper training<sup>2**</sup>
- Screening/referral
- Crisis treatment
- Ongoing mental health
- Peer support groups
- Other suicide programs.

This inventory of suicide-prevention programs offers a snapshot of services recognized by survey respondents. It represents a foundation from which a more comprehensive directory of services can be created. Program updates can be submitted to:

<sup>1</sup>*Note: Of the 718 surveys sent out, the response rate for the community stakeholders was 49%. In addition, surveys were returned by 52% of the school districts. The survey results also include responses from 100% of the directors of the mental health regional offices, who were interviewed via telephone.

**Note: The population-weighted, age-adjusted suicide rates were calculated in the following manner using vital statistics data from the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment. Separate suicide rates were calculated for 11 age categories by dividing the number of suicide deaths in each age category by the appropriate population for each age group for each of 10 years (1991-2000). The resulting age-specific suicide death rates were then standardized by multiplying each rate by the year 2000 adjustments assigned to each age category and then summed for each county for each year to obtain the age-adjusted suicide death rate for that county and year.*

Source: Data were derived from the National Comorbidity Survey, a nationally representative population survey of 8,098 persons between the ages of 15 to 54 who were surveyed between 1990 and 1992.

*Note: To develop a risk score for suicide attempts, a logistical regression model was created using "serious risk for attempt" as the dependent variable. Using data from the National Comorbidity Survey, five variables, found to be significantly related to suicide attempts, were used to develop a risk score for each Colorado county. These were: female gender, living alone, employment, past-year major depression diagnosis and past-year other psychiatric diagnosis. County-specific data were then used to determine the estimated risk for suicide attempts in each Colorado county.

*Note: To be diagnosed with major depression or another psychiatric illnesses, respondents had to meet diagnostic criteria for the disorder as defined in the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, 3rd edition (DSM-III) and measured by the NIMH Diagnostic Interview Schedule (DIS), version III. The category of "other psychiatric illnesses" included the following disorders: manic episode, dysthymia, bipolar disorder, alcohol abuse or dependence, drug abuse or dependence, schizophrenia, schizophreniform, obsessive compulsive disorder, phobia, somatization, panic, antisocial personality, and anorexia nervosa.
