Over 750,000 people live in rural Colorado.

52 of Colorado’s 64 counties are rural.

Rural Coloradans are more likely to be uninsured than urban Coloradans.

Most Coloradans have a usual source of care, but rural Coloradans have fewer options.

There is a shortage of health care providers to serve rural Colorado.

Coloradans living in rural areas face increased challenges in accessing health care, and good access is important for good health. To achieve a healthier rural Colorado, we must improve access to care across the state.
